Early Head Start provides a preschool program and parent activities for children birth to three years of age, while Head Start serves children 3-5 years of age.

Some children will qualify for preschool special education services through the school system. With a parent's consent, the county school system will do an assessment and meet with the parents to determine if the child meets the eligibility criteria to receive services.

If your child does not qualify for special education services or Head Start, you may want to consider having your child attend a childcare or a WV Home Visitation program within your county.

The local Resource & Referral (R&R) agency can help locate childcare and sometimes help with paying for childcare.

A wonderful resource to help you track your child's development through developmental screening is Help Me Grow WV.
