Waybright appointed to Women's Commission

The West Virginia Women's Commission announced Linda Waybright of Jackson County as a new commission member.

Waybright, a native West Virginian, resides in Jackson County with her husband Richard. Following graduation from Cowen High School in Webster County, WV, she earned her BS in Vocational Home Economics from West Virginia University and her MA in Counseling and Guidance from the West Virginia College of Graduate Studies. Having worked as a middle school guidance counselor, she retired from the WVU Extension Service as a Families and Health agent in Jackson County in 2008. Waybright is an active member of Calvary United Methodist Church-Ripley, the Jackson County Healthy Families/Healthy Children Coalition and a local 4-H leader. She is a life-long resident of West Virginia.

The West Virginia Women's Commission has 11 commissioners serving women and families across the state.
