WV STARS Is Providing Benefits for All Early Care and Education Practitioners in the State

by Natalie Snider

When WV STARS, West Virginia's State Training and Registry System, was developed eight years ago, the goal was to implement a professional development system for all early childhood programs across the state. Since its beginning in 2000, WV STARS has grown significantly, not only in the numbers of individuals being served, but also the benefits that can be provided. Many providers working in the field of early care and education recognize WV STARS and are familiar with some aspects of the program, such as the Career Pathway Credential, but are unaware of all of the benefits that WV STARS can offer all early care and education practitioners.

All individuals working in the early care and education field, working directly with children or families or in an administrative position, can apply for a Career Pathway Credential by submitting a completed Career Pathway Application either online or by mailing in an application to the WV STARS office. Once approved on the Career Pathway, participants will receive a credential that shows the Career Pathway Level. This level is based on their education (both formal and informal) as well as experience. Having a Career Pathway Credential presents a professional image to parents and employers by showing that the individual views their position as a career and is interested in continued learning to grow in that career.

Along with the credential, Career Pathway participants also have access to their WV STARS Professional Development Record, a transcript that lists all WV STARS Registered Training taken while the participant holds an active Career Pathway Credential. This record assists early childhood practitioners in keeping up with their training requirements and setting goals for professional development. The record can be accessed online by individuals who have an active Career Pathway Credential on the WV STARS website at www.wvearlychildhood.org.

Not only does participation on the Career Pathway benefit providers on an individual level, but it also benefits the early care and education workforce in West Virginia. WV STARS has the capability of gathering and providing information about the education, experience, employment, and training in the early care and education field.

Reports that have been provided for policy makers in the past have included reports showing the levels of education and experience of participants working in various programs across the state and information about training being offered in different regions.

WV STARS as a system will continue to grow in the upcoming years. With that growth will come new ways for WV STARS to assist early care and education practitioners. Your input regarding WV STARS and the services provided is always welcomed and can be heard by contacting the WV STARS office by phone at (304) 529-7603 or by e-mail at tcr@rvcds.org. Individuals working with the WV STARS program are available to answer any questions and provide assistance in completing forms and applications.

Funded through the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources, Bureau for Children and Families, Division of Early Care and Education.

Exciting changes are coming soon for child care providers and families of WV

Below is a excerpt from a letter recently sent to West Virginia Child Care Providers from the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources:

Effective May 1, 2009, child care centers and family child care homes and facilities will be paid more to serve children whose parents receive financial aid for child care while the parents work or attend school. The new payment rates are based on the results of a market rate survey completed last year and will more closely match what parents pay privately for child care services. Providers will see the increase on the check they receive in June.

Type of Care	Birth to 24 Months	25 to 36 Months	37 to 59 Months	60 Months & Up
Family Home (4 - 6 Children)	Current: $17 per day	New: $20 per day	Current: $16 per day	New: $20 per day
Family Facility (7 - 12 Children)	Current: $19 per day	New: $25 per day	Current: $18 per day	New: $20 per day
Center (13 or more Children)	Current: $25 per day	New: $28 per day	Current: $20 per day	New: $24 per day

Effective July 1, 2009, the eligibility guidelines for parents will be increasing to reflect the new FY 2009 Federal Poverty Level. The increased guidelines will allow more families to be eligible for the child care program, easing the financial burden for West Virginians in this difficult economic environment. For a 2 person family the new monthly income limit will be $1,821 at entry and $2,246 at exit, for a 3 person family it will be $2,289 at entry and $2,823 at exit, for a 4 person family it will be $2,756 at entry and $3,399 at exit, and for a 5 person family it will be $3,224 at entry and $3,976 at exit.

A more detailed chart with the new provider payment rates is available online at www.wvchildcare.org. The new eligibility guidelines will be available online after June 30, 2009. Providers and parents should contact their local child care resource and referral agencies for further information.

Behavior Consultant Corner, by Shannon Taylor

Hello, friends!

In times when the world can seem like a big and scary place, it's comforting to be surrounded by people who care. It is well-known that children who feel safe tend to behave better than those who do not. Maintaining your own composure and being consistent with children is a good starting point for creating a safe and loving environment.

This is the key toward building a connection with any child, but especially those who are exhibiting some challenging behaviors. Traditionally it was thought that the way to avoid conflict was with bribes, threats, manipulation, and control. We now know that conflict is an opportunity to teach and to connect with children. My grandmother used to say, "You can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar!" The same principle applies... children will be more cooperative if you use love instead of fear to govern your classroom or home. Making a connection with children requires that you offer empathy, encouragement, choices, support, compassion, positive intent, and understanding. This will go so much further than punishment, blame, and showing your power. Children who feel safe and connected construct, while children who feel unsafe and disconnected destruct! Creating this type of

...children will be more cooperative if you use love instead of fear to govern your classroom or home.

environment for a child helps his or her brain function at its best by making the shift from feeling that someone else has control to learning self-control. This shift naturally brings with it the skills of problem solving, anger management, conflict resolution, communication, pro-social skills, and assertiveness. There are literally hundreds of ways to create a safer and more loving environment. Here are just a few suggestions to get the ball rolling: Sing songs together, give hugs freely, have a secret handshake, read books that are special to each child, spend one on one time each day with each child, have techniques in place to help children calm down or relax, have rituals for different events – good morning, good-bye, birthdays, etc., have a daily schedule and a few simple classroom or home rules – post each visually (with pictures)

Integrating these ideas can give your classroom or home a more positive energy while making the children in your care feel safe and connected with you! Please feel free to contact me if you would like additional suggestions or resources to try with the children in your care.

Warmest Regards,
Shannon

Infant/Toddler Corner by Sue Knisely

Social Emotional Development in a child is the foundation to all other types of development. The first thing a baby needs in order to develop a healthy social emotional development is to feel secure. In order to feel secure, the caregiver must respond to the babies' needs. A relationship will be formed when the babies' needs are met. If the baby cries, it is the job of the care giver to wait a few seconds to see if the baby can calm and comfort him/herself. If not, then you then will need to pick him/her up and give comfort. If they continue to cry, you need to figure out why they are crying. When they are left to cry for extended periods of time, they are actually destroying brain cells caused by the production of cortisol produced during stress. Excessive stress in infancy will inhibit brain development. In order to reverse the effects of the cortisol, a child care provider needs to help a baby feel secure through touch. Touch releases a calming hormone called oxytocin into the body. We're all born with a great need for touch. To thrive, newborns must be fed touch as much as food. Children instinctively initiate and seek out touch when they need it. If a child does not do this, it raises a red flag that there could be abuse or neurological damage. Babies need to be held and cuddled. This nurturing sends a message to the baby's brain that they are important, and they have the power to make things happen. A result of the feeling of having that power to make things happen, is a healthy social-emotional development. A baby needs be protected and comforted. You cannot spoil a baby. If their needs are ignored, the message to their brain is that their needs are not important and they have no control and in response, their social-emotional development will be inhibited. Once the baby becomes mobile, it is important that they be allowed to explore in a safe place. The caregiver should stay in close proximity to the child though, because they will still need to feel secure. The best place for you to be when a child is playing is on the floor with them. Show the babies in your care that you love them. Touch them as much as possible. Give them massages. Rub their little feet. Let them know that being with you is a safe place to be, and in return the child will be happy, content, and able to develop socially and emotionally.

If you are an early childhood professional in a family child care home, center, or facility of children ages birth to 35 months for at least 20 hours per week, and are registered with West Virginia State Training and Registry System (S.T.A.R.S.) you are eligible to take the WVIT program. After completion of the sessions, you will receive 50 hours of training credit. Six of those hours are spent onsite with you as you are delivering care to the children. You will receive resources to help you deliver better quality care if you meet all of the requirements. A stipend will be given to the family child care provider, facility or center after you have completed the classes if the requirements are met.

Directors of child care centers must attend an Administrator's module before sending staff. The directors are to sign a statement of assurances that promises to implement the practices learned in WVIT in their infant and toddler rooms. The next five hour Administrator's modules will be held on July 7th at the LINK office in Huntington. Please call to register. The next WVIT class will be held at LINK in Huntington beginning July 9th (Thursdays) at 1:00PM (each class is approximately 4-5 hours) Please call Sue Knisely at 304- 523-9540 ext 228 or 1-800-894-9540 ext. 228 for specific times and dates, to register for the next class, or about any other questions or concern.

Early Care & Education Modules by Kerry Carnegie

Providing care for young children is more than just watching children, it's a profession. Participating in the Components of Quality Care & Education (CQCE) modules puts you on the right track to becoming the type of child care provider that you would want caring for your own children. The CQCE modules can offer learning opportunities from room arrangement to conflict resolution strategies, from building partnerships with families to including children with special needs. Participating in the CQCE modules is the perfect opportunity for providers to become better child care professionals.

in which participants gain knowledge in several core competencies. The modules are designed to provide resources to providers and to enhance their knowledge and skills in child development. Upon completing the eight week course, providers will receive thirty two (32) hours of professional development and resources to be used in their early childhood programs. Requirements for these training modules include a pre and post on site visit by the training specialist and every participant must be registered with the West Virginia State Training and Registry System (S.T.A.R.S.).

This time the series will be hosted by Growing Places Children's Center in Hamlin (1st street, Hamlin). Registration deadline is Thursday, July 9. Participants must attend every session and no walk in or stand by participants will be accepted and there will be no waiting list for individual sessions.

ACDS Corner

By Sherrie Barrett

The Apprenticeship for Child Development Specialist (ACDS) will soon begin fall classes.

If you currently work in the field of early care and education at least 20 hours per week with children birth through eight, you may want to consider this educational opportunity. ACDS is a rewarding program at a minimal cost to the participant. It is a way to learn best practice and the curriculum taught is based on current research. The classes are taught by professionals who also have experience in the field. The program is four semesters, taught one evening per week and each semester is 15 weeks. You can also earn training hours toward licensing requirements as well as college credit. If you are interested in ACDS or have questions about the program, please contact Sherrie Barrett at 304-523-0433.
