	MANUAL OF ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH PROCEDURES
Section	Administration	Date	December 16, 1985	Procedure #	A-10
Subject	Information Bulletin			Page	1 of 1

There is more technical information available than can be effectively disseminated or assimilated. Courses, seminars and presentation on numerous subjects are of interest and would be of considerable aid to environmental health personnel in discharging their duties. Much of this is not readily available to field personnel and a means is needed to augment their normal technical information, such as journals and reference books.

These informational bulletins are not designed to contain policy, procedure or method that constitute need for incorporation into the coding system of the Procedures Manual. They will, however, be provided with a separate coding for reference purposes only, for example: Information Bulletin – 4, would be the fourth such bulletin issued.

Each individual in receipt of an informational bulletin is charged with the responsibility of reviewing the material and determining his use and storage of it.
